EDITORIAL

Study! Study! Study! This is a word that is heard every day. We should make our high school years worthwhile. We may think that studying doesn't help any, but when we are preparing for college or for a job, a good education will pay.

Get your homework and you will also have time for extra-curricular activities. It isn't really having fun that counts! Education comes before entertainment!

Letters to the Editors

To the Editor:

I would like to commend the cooks and the Future Homemakers for the delicious banquet that was served on Wednesday night, November 15. Everyone enjoyed the meal and appreciated the time and effort it took to prepare it.

Mike Owens

To the Editor:

The students at North Knox deserve to be praised for the way they have acted at the convocations. The student body as a whole has been quiet and attentive.

At both convocations respect for the speakers was shown through the attention that was given. There were no major distractions and very few minor ones. There was no undercurrent of private conversation.

The student body deserves this praise and should have enough self-pride to maintain and improve its standard of behavior at convocations. This is our school and we make the school. Others hear about the school, so let's make sure we are proud of what they hear about us.

CONVOCA TION held

Who is more lonely than a prisoner in a state pen? In this huge world a prisoner is alone, surrounded by bars and more bars. You know, because you've been there.

You think back over your whole life. Yes, it all started when you were a punk kid, trying to be big and taking that first drink and first smoke. Finally, you get into a little trouble and you're pulled in, "O.K. son, anything you say may be held against you, you have the right to remain silent until you have an attorney." The noise of rushing feet, police cars, and shouting reaches your ears. You feel alone and scared. As a little time passes, things turn out a l l right, and you get off the hook. Six months, probation, y o u think: That's not so bad, b u t you'll never do anything like that again.

When you go home y o u f e e l rejected; people look at your life, you are a criminal. They s a y, "Don't be too friendly, he might g e t you into trouble." You go to your girlfriend's house a n d h e r father answers the door. "Hi, Mr. Smith, is Nancy here?" "No, she's not, she's gone and won't be back for a long time. You'd better leave." So you get mad at Mr. Smith, the world and yourself.

What can you do? You go back to the gang and this time you're made a leader. Then it happens, yours and another gang have a big rumble and you pull a knife. Before you realize what you're doing, you jab the knife into a boy's chest; you feel the blood running down your hands. Then comes the bright lights, police, handcuffs...

After the trial, when you've received a life sentence, you know it's all over. You had your fun as a hood and your glory as a leader. But now it's gone.

In The Spotlight

Convocation

Tamra Sue Walls, known as "Little One," is a well-known member of the junior class.

Tammy was born in Dearborn, Michigan, on May 9. She has been a Warriorette for three years and this year she is serving as co-captain. Tammy is also a member of the Journalism Club, History Club, and F.H.A.

David Lane is included in Tammy's likes, but people without any school spirit are her dislikes.

Tammy's future plans are to go to Tri-State Beauty College, in Evansville. Her life's goal is to become a beautician.

Tammy says, "I have a '57 Chevy that's blue and white and is really great. I love it, but there is only one thing wrong, it doesn't run!"

Tammy has advice for all. She says, "Keep cool and calm."

SENIOR KEYS

On Wednesday, November 29, 1967, the seniors received their senior keys from Josten's. The keys were ordered in October by those seniors who wished to purchase them.

The seniors could order seniors keys as necklaces, charms, or even as key chains. They also could order as many as they wanted, as well as the different kinds.

Man was created first, and then woman was created to improve the situation. Since then, man has been looking forward to further improvements.

Steve Neal goes by the name of "Moe."

Steve was born in Vincennes on March 3, 1951. Steve's activities are very numerous. They are the following: FFA, 1-2-3, football, 1-3; Cross Country, 2; track, 2.

Moe's likes include: Sheryl, Chevys, dances, and sports. His dislikes include conceited people and Fords.

His advice is not to worry about studying, just run around and have a good time, for you are only in high school once.

For future plans, Steve plans to finish high school and then attend college. He doesn't know what comes after that. His goal in life is to buy a new car and make a lot of money.

Steve drives a light blue '57 Chevy. It has a stereo tape player and two chrome reverse wheels.

Steve's answer to the question what is your unforgettable experience? "When I got caught Halloweening Mr. Skeens!"

So important were millstones for grinding grain in Israel that they were forbidden to be taken in pledge in order that a man's family might not be deprived of the means of preparing their food. Deuteronomy 24:6 reads: "No man shall take the millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's life to pledge."

On Tuesday morning, November 21, all North Knox students and faculty met in the gymnasium for its fifth annual Thanksgiving Convocation.

The North Knox Choir participated by singing selections from There Shall a Star from Jacob Come, Let us Break Bread Together, and Up Up and Away.

After the choir finished their songs, Jo Blann gave a talk about "squares." She said that throughout history, all great men have been considered "squares." Jo cited such examples as George Washington, Patrick Henry, Ben Franklin, and more recently John Glenn. Without such men as these, our country wouldn't be the great nation it is today.

Following Jo's talk, Elaine Finke read a poem of Thanksgiving. The band ended the convocation by playing Hymn of All Nations, America the Beautiful, and March America.

The secretary bird is so-called because the stiff tuft of feathers sticking out from the back of its neck reminded early naturalists of a secretary with quill pens in his hair. The bird is long legged, is a native of Africa, stands nearly four feet high, and is considered one of the world's most powerful birds of prey. It is often kept around ranches because its huge talons can kill the most venomous snakes.

LIFE IN THE YEAR 2000

The health classes wrote descriptions of life in the year 2000--how old they will be and what kind of person they would like to be.

There will be hundreds of cloverleaves and super-highways. Cars will follow electronic wires in the road by a guidance system to prevent accidents. Planes will fly at supersonic speeds. Buildings will be taller and made out of materials from the moon or other planets. The population will double. We may make trips to the moon or to the ocean floor. Trains will go through vacuum tubes. Scientists will have found cures for cancer and other diseases, especially heart disease. I will be 47, an easy going fellow with plenty of life, health and a spirit for living.

--Steven Myers

BOMB OF the Month

The Bomb of the Month contest was won by Steve Neal with his blue '57' Chevy. This car is a four-door hard-top equipped with a 283 cubic inch V8 and automatic transmission.

The voting for the Bomb of the Month is done by ballots deposited in the box in Room 106.

FAMOUS QUOTES

Mrs. Sisko: "What is a rhombus? I said rhombus, not rhumba, or any of those other kind of dances."

Mr. Walker, commenting day after election: "My old home town of Montgomery made the news. It was the only place in the state where they didn't print up ballots!"

Mr. Hardin after showing a film strip and asking a question, "I'll turn on the light so you can think."

Mrs. Sisko trying to open a drawer and finding she couldn't: "Just as there's a combination to our windows, there's a combination to the desk."

Mr. Walker: "I left home when I was 17, by request."

The students and faculty of North Knox extend their sympathy to Steve Hill, senior, of Bruceville. His grandfather, Lloyd Hill, passed away Thursday, November 30, after a long illness.

SMOKE SIGNALS

"It's not that I don't want to be interviewed, it's just that I don't know what to say," was Mrs. Sisko's comment as we began the interview. "I really enjoy North Knox, and the kids and the faculty I know are great.

"The senior's advice in the paper is study hard, but enjoy your senior year. I also say enjoy your senior year, but study hard. You'll find when you get into college that the freshman year is nearly the same as your senior year in high school. Much of the freshman college material is senior high material. For instance, in even the "easy" math courses it is taken for granted that the student knows algebra, geometry, and trigonometry. The student is just expected to know this. So I say, sure, have fun your senior year, and I did, but also study hard.

Mrs. Sisko graduated from Vincennes Lincoln, Vincennes University, and Indiana State University. In her family everything she did was academically based. She worked while going to school. "Between my freshman and sophomore, and sophomore and junior, years in high school, I tutored in Latin.

"Many of the students already know of my background. When I started out, I wanted to be an English teacher because my aunt is an English teacher. After a year of Latin and the preciseness of it because it is so exact and not so many exceptions to the rule, I decided I wanted to be a Latin teacher. In my junior year of high school, I had a math teacher who made math more than $2+2=4$. He showed us how it would relate later on. Some boys in my class wanted to be engineers and he had to create an interest for them. Four or five of us students decided we would make math mean something to our students, too.

"My grades always came first in everything. If I had a test the next day after a basketball game in the middle of the week, I never went to the game. The first basketball away-game I ever went to was the regionals my senior year. I'm glad my parents did this way. Sure I missed out on some fun, but the regionals meant more to me because when your team goes to the regionals, they're really up there.

"Once in college, I was really glad my parents had made me study. Freshman English is a flunk-out course: My freshman year in English I used a great majority of the themes I had written in high school I got an A in that course on semester and a B+ the second. By knowing the right way to study, I didn't need as much time to work on my assignments and was able to take in more activities at V.U.

"I do have one warning to people going to college. College study is a lot different from high school study. You are having an introduction here at North

Knox with the floating periods. But you must also realize that you need to study on the days that you don't have class. If something comes up and you don't get to study on the day off, sure enough you'll go into class and have a quiz the next day.

"My advice is work hard the first two years of college, but then don't slack off. This way you'll have a set pattern of study and be able to get more things done.

"So kids, in spite of all this advice, you can still have fun in school, but you must also study hard."

geometry class

Mrs. Sisko was presenting logical arguments to her third-period geometry class. She said, "We're not questioning the truth of this statement, we're just accepting it. All fast runners are rabbits. Jeff is a fast runner. Therefore, Jeff is a rabbit."

A voice came from the back of the room, "Give him a carrot!"

Another student questioned this, "When you have a fast track runner, you don't say, go rabbit, go!!!"

"I just finished my Christmas list. Now, all I have to do is decide what to give every-
